B.C. forestry disposes of tree seedlings

Herald Staff Writer

PRINCE GEORGE—For the second year in a row, the B.C. forest service has been forced to dispose of large numbers of tree seedlings instead of planting them.

Although forestry officials often claim the only thing holding up silviculture is the lack of seedlings, close to two million will be destroyed by the forest service this year.

The seedlings, scheduled for planting in the Prince George and Vancouver forest regions had too be destroyed after planting was postponed this spring.

Tree-planting operations were delayed by the heavy snow fall and cold spring weather which left plantation sites covered with snow until well into the normal planting season. Unusually hot and dry conditions soon after cut short the season.

The seedlings, which had already been removed from nurseries in preparation for planting, cannot be re-planted.

Vancouver Regional manager Don Grant said the good weather now comes too late for the trees.

"Seedlings planted beyond their normal growth rhythm either do not survive or result in inferior trees," Grant said.

Prince George regional manager John Cuthbert said the trees would have to be disposed of.

Last year, the Prince Rupert forest region was forced to destroy close to 500,000 seedlings because of problems with moths, insecticides, fungicides, and tree planters.

Those trees had been grown in Surrey where problems in preparing them for planting led to insect and fungus infections. Tree planters refused to handle the trees because of the chemicals they had been treated with to clear up the pest problem.

Most of those trees had been destined for planting in the Kalum Timber Supply Area.

The ministry of forests expects to plant approximately 117 million seedlings annually until 1985-1986. In 1980 about 75 million trees were planted.

Eurocan offers to supply hatchery

Herald Staff Writer

KITIMAT—Eurocan Pulp and Paper and the federal government have signed an agreement providing a warm water supply from Eurocan's Kitimat mill to the salmon hatchery under construction on the Kitimat River.

Federal Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc and Eurocan president Lars Wrede signed the water agreement recently allowing the $9.6 million hatchery a warm water source for heating and incubation uses.

Eurocan will be modifying its waste water system to supply the hatchery via a 1.4 kilometre pipeline. Eurocan will maintain the system under contract from the department of fisheries and oceans.

Eurocan had previously co-operated with fisheries in the operation of a five-year pilot hatchery project on the mill site itself.

The new agreement is expected to save fisheries as much as $300,000 annually. The water will be used to heat the hatchery building and to keep its water supply ice-free in winter. The warm water will also be used to heat water used to incubate salmon eggs in order to produce larger and stronger fish.

Eurocan vice-president Paul Hamalainen said the company's involvement with fisheries should be regarded as an ongoing relationship and as an example of how industry and government can work together for mutual benefit.

The Kitimat hatchery will be the largest in the province when it is completed sometime next year. It will be used to enhance the Kildala, Dals, and Blah Creek salmon stocks and should result in an increased catch of 130,000 Chinook, 200,000 Chum, 65,000 Coho, and 6,000 pink salmon each year by westcoast fishermen.

Prisoners stab guards

MONTREAL (CP) — A foiled escape attempt turned into a bloody hour-long riot Sunday at maximum-security Archambault Institute, leaving three guards and two prisoners dead.

Another seven guards were injured in the incident, in which as many as 150 prisoners were believed to have taken part, a Corrections Canada spokesman said.

"This is probably the bloodiest prison riot ever in Quebec," one shaken but uninjured guard said when the melee was finally quashed around midnight EDT.

All of the dead were stabbed with home-made knives carried by prisoners, prison spokesman Gaston Pelletier told reporters. There were also unconfirmed reports that some of the dead guards were mutilated.

One of the dead guards, Leandre Leblanc, was working his last shift before retiring after 25 years in the federal penitentiary service. He was 60.

His two dead colleagues were identified as Denis Rivard, 27, and David Van Den Abele, 36.

The dead prisoners — both of whom were serving life terms — were Yvon Martin, 27, convicted for a double murder in the Quebec City suburb of Charlesbourg in November, 1979, and Christian Perreault, 24, sentenced earlier this year for killing Montreal policeman Emmanuel Cloutier during a bank robbery last fall.

All of the victims died overnight, except Leblanc who died in hospital later this morning.

Two of the injured guards were in critical condition, although one was later reported to be out of danger. Five other guards were treated in hospital for wounds and shock but later released.

Pelletier said the riot began at 10:30 p.m. EDT after several convicts attacked a group of 10 unarmed guards near the control centre in the core of the large institution in Ste. Anne-des-Plaines, 50 kilometres north of Montreal.

The prisoners, who were returning to their cells from an outside recreation yard, were apparently trying to take hostages in order to escape, he said. But a guard in the control centre quickly shut off all possible avenues of escape before fleeing to safety.

The incident then turned into a riot as the convicts wielded their home-made weapons, smashed furniture and pulled sinks from bathroom walls.

Several prisoners managed to break into the control centre, smashing equipment and pulling wires.

The prison's tactical squad then fired shotguns above the heads of rioting convicts and released tear gas bombs. Pelletier did not say whether the first attempt to end the riot was successful or whether more force was needed.

No prisoners were shot, Pelletier stressed, because "our guards had orders to shoot over their heads."

"We have no idea how many of the convicts actually took part in the riot," Pelletier added. "It could be 100 or 150," although many of Archambault's 425 convicts were still in the recreation yard when the guards were attacked.

The injured guards and the bodies of the two dead convicts were only found after the riot.

All prisoners returned to their cells early today "one by one," Pelletier said, and would remain there until further notice.

Quebec provincial police officers who were called in to patrol the prison perimeter remained on the scene until prison authorities had recovered full control.

Federal penitentiary commissioner Donald Yeomans was also reportedly at the prison.

Pelletier described damage to the prison — scene of several previous riots, hostage-takings and murders — as "serious."

Archambault has been relatively quiet of late, despite its reputation as home for some of Canada's most violent prisoners.

Six prisoners were murdered in 1979 alone, with some of the killings linked to the use of illicit drugs within the prison.

In February, 1978, Archambault director Michel Roy was murdered in the driveway of his suburban Montreal home. The killing climaxed a year of violence at the prison which included a hostage-taking, a riot and a strike by convicts refusing to work in institution shops.

Seminars offered

Herald Staff Writer

TERRACE—Groups with ideas about how the northwest should be developed will be interested in a series of seminars sponsored by the West Coast Environmental Law Association and scheduled towns throughout the area in August.

The seminars are geared towards informing groups what their rights are in regulatory hearings needed for any large-scale development in the area and how to make the best use of opportunities to present briefs to those hearings.

The seminars are scheduled for Prince Rupert, Terrace, and Smithers on Aug. 3, 4 and 5 respectively before moving to Iskut Aug. 6-10, Telegraph Creek Aug. 11-2, and Lower Post Aug. 13-14.

With plans for large developments nearing the application stage, northern residents could soon find themselves involved in hearings over huge hydro-electric projects, LNG ports and off-shore oil and gas drilling among other things.

Brice Kaun of the West Coast Environmental Law Association will be putting on the seminars.

The proposed agenda covers administrative law processes in general before getting into the detail of the hearing process and the preparation of a brief.

Kaun said the idea of the seminars is to prepare groups in the north facing the huge $7.5 billion and $13.2 billion Stikine-Iskut and Lillard Hydro projects for the hearings those projects will go through with the B.C. Utilities Commission.

"This agenda is designed for the smaller northern communities of Iskut, Telegraph, Dease and Lower Post," Kaun said. "The Terrace workshop will also address itself to the Kemano projects and off-shore oil and gas."

More information on the seminar is available from Joe Murphy at 635-6697.

Israel continues its assault on PLO

BEIRUT (AP) — Israeli jets attacked the Palestine Liberation Organization's battered enclave in West Beirut for a fifth straight day today, as Israeli officials attacked PLO leader Yasser Arafat for "fraud" in a meeting with U.S. congressmen.

The Israeli jets made their divebombing run over West Beirut this afternoon, pounding the same targets hit in the previous four days' bombing around the PLO's headquarters.

The Israeli planes continued to foil the PLO's anti-aircraft missiles by releasing scarlet decoy balloons to divert the missiles.

There was no immediate count of casualties.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir called the document Arafat signed Sunday accepting "all UN resolutions relevant to the Palestinians" an "exercise in fraud and deception."

Arafat signed the statement for a group of five visiting congressmen. Representative Paul McCloskey (R-Calif.) said he thought the statement satisfied U.S. terms for opening direct negotiations with the PLO and urged the Reagan administration to do so.

McCloskey told a news conference in the "no man's land" between Moslem West Beirut and Christian East Beirut that the statement applied to UN Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 recognizing Israel's right to exist.

McCloskey first said an Arafat aide had written on the back of the document a list of UN resolutions that presumably included 242 and 338. But when an Associated Press reporter who saw the backside of the document noted there was no reference to resolution 242, McCloskey said: "No, it's not (listed), but — he (Arafat) kept saying all of them, including 242."

The PLO's UN observer, Zehdi Terzi, said that was not true and pointed out that 242 refers to the "refugee question," not to the Palestinians specifically. He told reporters in New York that Arafat's endorsement applies to UN General Assembly resolution 181 calling for separate Palestinian and Jewish states.

The head of PLO's mission to the UN offices in Geneva, Daoud Barakat, said the document signed by Arafat does not represent a change in the PLO's position. "Arafat has said this a hundred times, but the Americans wanted it on paper," he said.

The Israeli cabinet said the McCloskey-Arafat announcement "joins a long line of announcements in the past aiming only to obtain propaganda advantages."

But Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak said in a speech in Cairo that Arafat's statement was "a very good opening for a peaceful and good solution" of the Middle East crisis.

McCloskey said he believes Arafat's statement is sufficient to warrant U.S. recognition of the PLO. But the State Department said it will study the record of the Beirut meetings, and the White House recommended "extreme caution." Other U.S. officials in Washington who asked not to be identified said they don't think Arafat met the U.S. requirement for recognition — acceptance of resolutions 242 and 338, including Israel's right to exist.

Israel's ambassador to France, Meir Rosenne, said in Paris that Arafat, head of the largest of the eight PLO factions, does not have authority to change the organization's charter, which calls for replacement of Israel with a secular Palestinian state.

The Israeli military command reported that all its planes returned safely from the 20-minute raid Sunday morning and five-minute attack Sunday night on Palestinian ammunition dumps near the Sabra shantytown in West Beirut.

The Lebanese police reported at least 12 civilians killed or wounded in the morning attack but had no casualty report after the night raid.

Israel, which resumed the bombing of Beirut last Thursday after a 27-day lull, is demanding that Arafat and his 8,000 guerrillas get out of Lebanon and is threatening to storm the Moslem sector of the capital city if they don't go on their own.

Commodore still thrives

BEIRUT (AP) — Windows are crisscrossed with masking tape to keep them from shattering during a shelling. Barrels block off streets on each side of the building to keep car bombs away. The executive office suite contains a stock of assault rifles.

The Commodore Hotel, home base for 175 foreign journalists covering Israel's invasion of Lebanon, is thriving despite the war in West Beirut where Palestinian guerrillas are trapped by encircling Israeli forces.

"The Commodore operates better in war than in peace," said Yusef Nazzal, 39-year-old Jordanian proprietor of what has become a virtual international press centre.

The lobby, often strewn with television equipment, is a gathering place for members of Lebanon's parliament, officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization, relief workers, doctors, prominent Lebanese businessmen and the few remaining western diplomats left in the beleaguered Moslem sector of the capital.

Hotel policy requires guns and grenades be checked at the reception desk, where Teletype and Telex machines clatter almost around the clock.

"In case of shooting around the hotel, the management insists that neither television cameramen or photographers attempt to take pictures. This endangers not only their lives but those of the guests and staff. Those not prepared to co-operate may check out of the hotel."

The notice stemmed from a street battle early this month between two leftist Lebanese militias over a vacant apartment house nearby.

The gunmen turned the weapons on photographers who tried to film the battle and a machine-gun mounted on a pickup truck was aimed into the lobby, where patrons dived behind couches.

"It is, without doubt, one of the most dangerous places in the world," said Nazzal.

He explained in an interview that he stays on in West Beirut because he likes challenges and because of long-term friendships with journalists.

"I'm thinking about having new T-shirts made to thank the press for saving West Beirut," said Nazzal, who acts as banker, press adviser and psychiatrist to his guests. "The people here have the press to thank for saving their lives, and I satisfied my ego that I helped the press function to make that possible."

Nazzal said he has won over most local militias and guerrillas to the idea that the press coverage has helped save off an Israeli onslaught into West Beirut through descriptions and pictures of destruction.

"It has been a slow process but most of them now accept the press," he said.

France's move to defy the U.S. on the Siberian gas pipeline issue was well timed last week, coming just hours after Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's propaganda announcement of the so-called easing of martial law.

What U.S. President Ronald Reagan wants from Moscow and Warsaw before he's willing to lift the ban on U.S. equipment for the pipeline: Relax martial law in Poland, free political prisoners, revive a dialogue with the Solidarity union.

None of these conditions have been met. Solidarity leaders still remain in prison, and while a few members are released from prison, nothing has really been accomplished. Martial law has been relaxed as long as no one is Solidarity makes a move outside the boundaries of the socialist system and the Polish Party of Workers. In reality martial law has not been relaxed at all. The Polish government is still talking with Solidarity leaders, but only in the interrogation rooms.

Now the socialist-communist government in France says that the U.S. and Europe is undergoing a "progressive divorce." It is easy to see who still loves freedom. The U.S. is demanding freedom for Poland but Europe is eager to be harnessed to the yoke of Soviet dependency on Siberian fuel. Remember what OPEC did once it got the West dependent on its oil supply?

Oil and power go hand in hand today. Moscow's offering of Siberian gas is only designed to bring Europe under its control. Meanwhile, the world thinks the U.S. conditions have been met in Poland, while nothing has been accomplished except a neat propaganda campaign for the Kremlin.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor,
Allan MacEachen's June budget is a tragic case of an opportunity wasted. The partial de-indexing of personal exemptions is an ill-disguised grab for more tax money from those still fortunate enough to have a job. The tumbling stock prices and our sinking dollar show what the financial markets think of this budget with its record deficit — a projected $19.55 billion. That's more than the entire 1973-74 federal budget.

One of the many failings of the budget was that it did little to cut and restrain government spending. For instance, while civil servants are being forced to accept a six per cent increase and while other taxpayers are being threatened with either accepting that ceiling or having wage controls imposed, the government's foreign aid budget will rise 17.67 per cent to a staggering $1.724 billion. The federal government will have to borrow money at 17 per cent or more to be able to give it away or to lend it at three per cent interest to the likes of Marxist Grenada and Tanzania.

CIDA has recently announced that they have earmarked $100 million over the next five years to communist China. China, however, isn't so poor that they weren't able to scratch up $1 million to contribute to the PLO.

If Canada is ever to struggle out of the present economic mess, the government simply must start putting the interests of Canadians first. One of the major causes of high interest rates is the federal deficit. The insatiable debt-ridden federal government soaks up huge sums of capital thus making it harder for businessmen, farmers, and homeowners to borrow the money they need. As a start toward erasing the deficit, we recommend the proposal of Tory MP John Gamble who urged the government to slash foreign aid by 80 per cent.

Third World population soars

PARIS (AFP) — In the year 2025, nearly three quarters of the world's old people will be living in Third World countries, United Nations estimates indicate.

The older-than-60s, who numbered 350 million in 1975, will be 590 million in the year 2,000 and 1,120 million, a quarter of a century later.

In 43 years time, one person out of seven will be over sixty compared to one in 12 in 1950.

The first world conference on aging organized by the United Nations opens in Vienna today, to study the process and its repercussions on society, chiefly in health care and retirement.

Most countries in Asia, Africa and South America have no generalized retirement, health and welfare schemes and the standard of living of old people is low.

In Costa Rica, for example, one state which has established a relatively modest retirement scheme, there were 125,000 older-than-60s in 1960, or 6.3 per cent of the population. The figure will double in 20 years. But already the additional burden of paying a pension to 125,000 people is posing problems for local authorities.

In Brazil, Mexico and Nigeria, the number of old people will have increased respectively 15, 13 and 12-fold between 1950 and 2025. In contrast, the increase will only be between two and five times for the Soviet Union, the United States, Italy and West Germany.

It is in Asia, the world's most densely populated region, that the percentage of old people is expanding fastest. During the next 20 years, the total population of Eastern and Southern Asia will increase by roughly 52 per cent, but the rate of increase for those in the older-than-60s age bracket will be 102 per cent.

By the year 2,000, because of a falling birth rate and increased life-expectancy, nearly half the old people in the world will live in Asia — 280 out of 590 million approximately.

UN researchers have found that developing Asian countries, facing more urgent problems, have been "overtaken" by the mass aging of their population. Moreover, as a result of urban development, industrialization and education, families now tend to disperse and can no longer afford the traditional support to aged relatives.

The same phenomenon has been observed in Africa, where the number of older-than-60s is expected to reach 42 million at the end of the century.

In Latin America if current trends continue, there will be 19 million more old people at the turn of the century than at present.

Their number will increase at a rate of 82 per cent compared with 65 per cent for the population as a whole, as average life expectancy which was 47 years between 1965 and 1970 reaches 74 in 18 years time.

Haitian reunion a miracle

CHICAGO (AP) — When Accus Serrant fled from Haiti four years ago, he hoped one day his wife could join him. She finally arrived, but only as the soft-spoken hospital janitor lay terminally ill with leukemia.

"It's like a miracle — for him, for her and for us," said Trudy Coplan, social services director at the suburban Skokie Valley Community Hospital.

The reunion Sunday came only after efforts by hospital workers and the mother of a U.S. senator to obtain State Department permission for the visit.

"I didn't think people would bring themselves out to help so much," said Serrant, 47.

Serrant came to work at the hospital after he fled Haiti in 1978 and was granted political asylum in the United States. He left his wife, Marie-Louise, and their five children in Haiti.

While in the United States, he sent every penny he could spare to his family, hoping they could one day join him.

But about a month ago, Serrant was diagnosed as having leukemia, and he began to deteriorate "very, very" rapidly, said hospital spokesman Patricia Brown. Although he is receiving chemotherapy, he is not expected to recover, she said.

Because hospital workers knew about Serrant's 38-year-old wife, they began to investigate ways of bringing her to see him.

"He is a special employee, and their hearts went out to him," said Janine Raymond, co-chairman of a program to help Haitian refugees. Hospital workers contacted her in an attempt to help Serrant.

A lawyer for Serrant had been unable, working through regular State Department channels, to get a temporary visa for Mrs. Serrant. So hospital employees sent a letter signed by more than 200 people asking Senator Charles Percy (Rep. Ill.) to help.

Even Percy's mother, Elizabeth, was contacted — by a friend who heard of Serrant's plight from one of the hospital workers.

Mrs. Percy arranged to have someone from the hospital call one night when her son was visiting, said Scott Cohen, a Percy aide. The next day, Percy called the State Department.

The State Department at first turned down Percy's request, then relented and gave Mrs. Serrant a 60-day visa, Cohen said.

"They are often concerned about foreigners coming and staying," Cohen said. "But this was clearly a humanitarian situation."

Serrant's fellow staffers were present Sunday to greet Mrs. Serrant, who speaks no English, give her a bouquet of roses and escort her to her husband's room.

With a broad smile, she embraced and kissed him.

Submarine security tight

SEATTLE (AP) — Security for the arrival of the nuclear submarine Ohio next month is so tight that the state will need permission from the Coast Guard to continue work on the new Hood Canal Bridge while the sub passes through the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Under Coast Guard regulations being disputed in federal court, about 30 kilometres of Hood Canal would be closed to virtually all unauthorized, non-military personnel until the 560-foot (170-metre) Ohio docks at the new submarine base at Bangor.

A second security zone of an area 900 metres around the sub is planned when the sub is moored at Bangor and may remain in effect when the Ohio leaves, said James Walker, alternate port captain for the Coast Guard.

After a hearing on the legality of the security zones Friday, U.S. District Judge Barbara Rothstein told attorneys for the government and opponents of the security zone to work out a compromise.

Walker said he expects permission to continue work on the bridge to be granted. Otherwise, the state would have to suspend work for about six hours.

Work on the bridge is slightly behind schedule but state officials say the span is still expected to open by early November.

The western half of the bridge sank in a violent windstorm in 1979.

The security zone will become effective Aug. 1 or whenever the Ohio enters the waters of northwestern Washington and could remain in effect until the end of the year.

Restrictions apply to all structures on the part of the canal to be closed, including private docks. Property owners would not be allowed on their docks without Coast Guard permits.

Walker said permits would be granted in most cases.

UNESCO conference opens

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Western culture's dominance of what the people of the Third World read and watch will come under fire again at UNESCO's second world cultural conference opening in Mexico City today.

Sources close to the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization said the United States and other western countries won't be able to prevent the two-week 100-country conference from adopting recommendations that governments do more to regulate cultural pursuits, especially in the field of communications.

The conference will see a renewal of the drive by Third World countries, which UNESCO Director General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal has fostered, for a "new world information order" to replace western news agencies by national news agencies in Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Governments of the developing countries say that their news media are dependent for news on western agencies that ignore their special needs. They also say that the western media, in reporting from their countries, concentrate on news unfavorable to them and ignore favorable news.

The western media say that UNESCO proposals to strengthen the national news agencies will increase government control over the media and journalists.

The draft agenda for the conference says modern communications have led to the development of "cultural industries" that can "cover the globe with their distribution networks."

"They are thus able to encourage mediocrity, to standardize tastes, to distort certain cultural values and to affect the behavior patterns of many population groups."

The conference will also debate culture and society, efforts to preserve the heritage of disappearing cultures, establishment of new historical districts, cultural co-operation and "measures to foster artistic and intellectual creativity."

UNESCO sources said the Soviet Union, Cuba and other Communist countries are expected to introduce resolutions calling for disarmament and an end to neo-colonialism and racism.

The 1,000 delegates include Greek Culture Minister Melina Mercouri, the actress, film director Costa Gavras, actor Marcel Heston and writers Simone de Beauvoir, Louis Aragon and James Michener.

Quebec land expropriated

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal cabinet has set Feb. 1 as the proclamation date for controversial legislation that would permit expropriation of Quebec land for a Newfoundland-sponsored hydroelectric corridor to export markets.

The legislation received royal assent earlier this month after the government agreed to postpone proclaiming for six months sections that extend the powers of the National Energy Board to cover hydroelectric transmission lines.

In broad terms, those sections allow the board to authorize expropriation of land in any province for interprovincial or international power lines.

But debate on the legislation focused on its potential impact on the dispute between Quebec and Newfoundland over power contracts.

Energy Minister Marc Lalonde, who proposed the amendment during final Commons debate on the legislation, said the delay might give the two provinces time to resolve their differences.

A cabinet order setting the Feb. 1 proclamation date was approved last week.

Under the existing contract, Newfoundland is obliged to sell most of the Churchill Falls power in Labrador to Quebec until 2041 at low prices set before oil prices shot up in the 1970s. Quebec then resells the electricity at higher prices.

Newfoundland wants the contract rewritten, but the two provinces have been unable to come to terms on the issue. Once the new legislation is proclaimed, Newfoundland will be able to apply to the National Energy Board for permission to build its own hydro transmission system through Quebec to export markets.

Newfoundland has indicated it is ready to make such an application as soon as possible, although it has been critical of the federal government for not introducing legislation that would have allowed it to wield power through Hydro Quebec's existing transmission facilities.

Meanwhile, the contract dispute has worked its way to the Supreme Court of Canada after a Newfoundland Court of Appeal decision to allow the province to break its 65-year-old contract with Quebec.

Quebec has appealed the verdict and the Supreme Court is expected to rule next month.

OTTAWA VIEWPOINT

by JIM FULTON
Skeena MP

After the fiasco of last November's budget, we all shared a hope that the Liberals had learned some hard economic lessons. But once again, Canadian have waited in vain for the government to provide economic leadership.

There is, in this budget, no commitment to bring down the crippling interest rates that have paralyzed our economy, attacked our housing industry, crippled small business and destroyed the security of workers all across the land. There is no constructive program to reduce the double digit inflation that threatens the well-being of millions of Canadians. And there are no serious initiatives to stimulate the economy and put the more than two million unemployed back to work.

True, there are some modest tax breaks for investors. But in the midst of a record-long recession, businesses have already indicated that the government's hand-out measures are not what the doctor ordered. And the $3000 to first-time homebuyers sounds good too. Until you realize that with mortgage rates at 20 per cent the required income for an average family house is close to $15,000 higher than what the average family earns. But worst of all, the government's job creation proposals are nothing short of shameful. At most, 80,000 jobs will be created — bringing down the rate of unemployment by a whopping 1 per cent.

In short, this budget is an admission of failure and a prescription for continued hard times.

But it's more than that. It's mean spirited and petty minded. What else can you call a document that cuts back on the automatic indexing of 900,000 pensions to senior citizens who receive more than the princely sum of $6000 a year? What other adjectives could you use for an economic program that makes scape goats of the public service, partially de-indexes family allowances, and cuts to 6 per cent the annual increase in personal income tax deductions of ordinary working people? All measures that will take $2.6 billion out of Canadian pockets over the next 20 months — a move that will reduce consumer spending, restrain the economy and put those same Canadians further behind than ever in their fight against inflation.

The only way out of this economic mess is for Finance Minister MacEachen to resign and make way for some new ideas that can get this country producing, working and moving again.

VICTORIA REPORT

by FRANK HOWARD
Skeena MLA

How would you like it if I sent you a Christmas card but made you pay for the card before I sent it to you and then charged the postage to you as well? You would probably tell me to go someplace else. But, what if you didn't know that you had paid for the card?

That is exactly the case with Sacred Cabinet ministers. They have been sending custom printed Christmas cards, at costs of up to $3,000 plus postage for which you paid. They simply ordered the Christmas cards and then had the printer send the bill to government for payment. And your generous government paid for them.

We have been examining the bills and invoices for Cabinet expenses and probably the most infamous revelations had to do with wine at $37.50 a bottle and Broadway Bob's "limousine and sugar babies" soiree in New York. But, there is more — much more.

For example bills for coffee have been run up and paid for. Coffee for a minister's visitors, coffee for himself, coffee for the people working in his office. Everywhere else we have a fund paid for by employees themselves to buy their own coffee. Not in a minister's office. You pay for that.

And, you pay for the sugar and the milk and the coffee filters, and the spoons, and the cups, and the saucers. And the serviettes, and the — well the list goes on and on and on.

We heard testimony before the Public Accounts Committee where a Cabinet minister, earning some $65,000 a year, takes a deputy minister to lunch. The deputy minister earns some $40,000 a year. Yet neither one of them pay for lunch. You, the taxpayer, pay for it.

There's a lot of talk these days about restraint, much of it coming from the mouths of the same people who make you pay for their Christmas cards and their custom-made clothing. We have a Cabinet in B.C. who enjoy the idea of spending other people's money so much that they want further restraints on those other people so they, the Cabinet, can continue on their spending binges.

So far this session, we in the New Democratic Party have moved motions to reduce the funds for Cabinet ministers, for their travelling expenses, for their office expenses (tea pots and coffee filters) for their advertising (Christmas cards). Every motion we have put forward has been defeated by the Secreds. Every time we in the NDP have put forward motions to restrain ministers in their profligate ways they have rallied behind their leader to keep on the course of excessive expenditures.

So far this session we have tried to reduce such government excesses by some $52,000,000. Think what $52,000,000 would mean if it were in your pockets rather than in the pockets of the government. $52,000,000 would buy a lot of Christmas cards and a lot of groceries.

But the Secreds have said that Christmas cards for them are more important than groceries for you.

Structured settlement ordered

YANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver area juvenile confined to a wheelchair for life because of a drinking driver has negotiated B.C.'s largest vehicle accident injury settlement — $8 million — and it's all tax free.

But the arrangement cost the Insurance Corporation of B.C. only about $500,000. That's the amount the company paid to purchase a monthly income insurance plan, called an annuity, for the claimant.

Yet to the youth, whose name was withheld, it pays $4,000 every month for 50 years (indexed at four per cent) and periodic lump sum payments which together total in the millions.

The financial arrangement, called a structured settlement, has become popular as a means of compensating people who are victims of catastrophic accidents.

The guaranteed monthly income is a "win" deal for the injured claimant, the corporation, and the public, says Vancouver lawyer Bernard Simpson, specialist in motor vehicle injuries and negotiator of several substantial structured settlements.

The annuity, unlike a one-time lump sum amount, provides financial security for a lifetime and can be specially designed to meet personal spending needs, he says.

The injured claimant who opts for a structured settlement doesn't pay Revenue Canada a penny. Recipients of lump sum settlements (or other than injury-related structured settlements) have to pay tax on the interest earned from the award.

Unlike the private insurance firms in Ontario, where between 300 and 400 such settlements have been negotiated over the past three years, the corporation will not disclose the amount they pay for an annuity to the client's lawyer.

The few B.C. lawyers who have gone the way of a structured settlement for their clients usually charge a percentage of the estimated present value of the annuity. In other words, a percentage of the amount they estimate the corporation pays out for the plan.

"But most lawyers think the concept threatens their contingency fees," says actuary Jim Rogers. "They are also suspicious of ICBC because the company refuses to disclose what it costs to purchase the annuity. Lawyers don't know how to assess what is being offered to their client. It's like handing them a sealed brown paper bag and saying 'Here, this is what we're going to give you.'"

However, structured settlements are not without some drawbacks. "Once the tailored-made payment plan is drawn up, it can't be changed. The money is locked in," said Simpson.

Meanwhile, most clients settle for a three to four per cent index on monthly payments. For example, an initial outlay of $128,000 will buy an injured person $1,000-a-month in the first year, $1,040 in the second year, $1,081 in the third year and so on. After 50 years the victim receives $6,833 a month at payments would have totalled slightly more than $1.8 million. Periodic lump sum payments could be included but would cost more.

Another way to increase the over-all settlement is to defer monthly payments for several years, long enough for a substantial amount of interest to accumulate. A structured payment arrangement can also absorb a major expense five years after the accident, such as graduation, further education or an extensive trip.

And it eliminates the threat of "being taken" by an unscrupulous acquaintance. Insurance agents estimate that 90 per cent of major windfalls — whether from lotteries, sweepstakes or court awards — are squandered within five years.

Remember when, ice cream and lemonade was just five cents. It seems like yesterday. Actually, it was Saturday at the Co-op store as a tribute to the oldtimers.

Bomb scare proves hoax

SEATTLE (AP) — Passengers on the steamship Princess Marguerite were promised "romance and adventure" by advertisements. They got an evacuation prompted by a bomb threat that turned out to be a hoax.

The 360-foot (110-metre) steamship, which makes daily round trips during the summer between Seattle and Victoria, B.C., resumed service about 400 passengers lighter Sunday after officials found no trace of a bomb and decided the threat was a hoax.

The vessel's regular 8 a.m. sailing to Victoria turned back about one hour and 25 miles out after a male caller told an emergency operator in Seattle that a bomb, timed to go off at "11 o'clock," was aboard the vessel.

A male caller telephoned the same threat to the KING Broadcasting Co. answering service in Seattle. KING Broadcasting owns KING-TV and KING Radio.

Two Coast Guard boats and the fireboat Duwamish, as well as Seattle firemen, were on alert when the ship returned to Seattle about 10 a.m.

After the ship docked and passengers disembarked, the ship was searched by a Seattle police bomb squad and a Port of Seattle police dog, but no bomb was found, said police spokesman Gary Flynn.

The Princess Marguerite left Seattle at 12:25 p.m.

A later bomb threat, also directed at the Princess Marguerite, was received about 45 minutes after the boat left.

That call also went to KING, said a Coast

Guard spokesman.

He said the master of the Marguerite was informed of the later threat, but felt it was not substantial enough to force a second return to port. It was disregarded.

Jenny Cornell of the British Columbia Steamship Co., which operates the Princess Marguerite, said the ship originally had 928 passengers but that only 549 were aboard for the second sailing.

Passengers who opted not to take the trip after the delay were to receive refunds through the mail, she said. All the initial passengers were told their cars would have to remain on board until the vessel's scheduled return to Seattle late Sunday night.

Passengers were not told of the bomb threat until the boat was almost docked at Seattle. Then, to the consternation of many, a second message asked them to stay aboard but to break up large groups.

"It's crazy. They said there was a bomb and that they wanted us to stay," said Bill Gencarella, a visitor from Arcadia, Calif.

Officials later explained that the evacuation was delayed a few minutes to give firefighters time to prepare emergency equipment and set up the gang plank.

Television advertisements for the steamship show a couple embracing while an announcer promises "romance and adventure" on the Seattle-Victoria cruises.

"They advertise adventure and romance on board," said John Shoemaker, of Seattle, who was taking his parents on the cruise. "I guess they weren't fooling."

Spectators roar approval

EDMONTON (CP) — About 6,000 spectators roared their approval as a record number of entries pushed off Sunday for the 23rd annual Sourdough raft race on the North Saskatchewan River.

Armed with buckets and bilge pumps, more than 2,300 people aboard 265 vessels took part in one of the feature events of the annual summer bustout called Klondike Days.

Sophisticated craft patterned after everything from jailhouses to Rubik's Cube floated alongside cruder rafts of inner tubes and plywood for the 16-kilometre run.

Winning wasn't the main object for most participants. Les Toth, a 15-year veteran of the event, said:

"I hurried back from vacation in Yellowstone just to be in the race. I enter just for the fun of it. It's a great feeling."

The Steeplejack, owned by Rocky Mountain Breweries, won the freighter racing event for the fourth straight year.

Other winners included: Women's race,

Robin Furlong and Lynn Wozny; men's race, Roderick Kaybridge and Mark McCullough; mixed, Peter Sutton and Kerry Sutton; novice, Andre Schwabenbauer and Michael Palek; commercial comedy, Dalvin T. M. Service Club; novelty comedy, Wayne Stollery and Richard Mottershead.

Elsewhere in Edmonton on Sunday, gowns of lime green, bright blue and candy pink whirled around the legislature grounds like confetti during the 11th annual Klondike interfaith service.

Edna Benjamin, decked out in pink gingham, said: "I think we're all young at heart and everyone likes to dress up."

The big chance to show off K-Days finery every year is the promenade.

An early evening thunderstorm cut short the plans of thousands who came downtown to watch and be watched Sunday, but for a while it was one of the biggest promenades in memory.

Death toll increases

TOKYO (Reuters) — The death toll in the south Japan flood disaster may reach 350 with 215 bodies already recovered, police said today.

They said most of the 166 people missing after freak rains caused floods and landslides in the Nagasaki area late last week are presumed dead.

Police and soldiers today said they found 202 bodies in rivers and under landslides and crushed houses while the coast guard said it found 13 bodies floating in the sea off Nagasaki.

Meanwhile, rain fell over large parts of central and western Japan today while the Japanese weather bureau warned of a new rain front approaching the south from the direction of China.

Police said 553 houses were destroyed or washed away and more than 26,000 other houses flooded in southern Japan.

River embankments were broken at 22 places, 65 bridges were washed away and roads damaged in 545 places.

Snowmobile owners race into lake

ST. LEON, Man. (CP) — Every summer Henri Grenier and a few friends in this southern Manitoba town drive their snowmobiles into a shallow lake.

It's part of an annual competition to see who can ride as far as possible across the lake without sinking.

People came from all around Saturday, armed with deck chairs and cameras, to see this year's contestants roar their machines down a straw-covered track at 120 kilometres per hour and into the weed-infested waters.

This was the first time one of the machines, which are usually reserved for frozen lakes and snow, actually spluttered and skimmed its way across the 750-metre stretch of water. Most of the other five quickly sank out of sight before reaching the middle.

A helicopter hovered overhead, scooping the snowmobiles out of the water before they became waterlogged and the engines damaged.

Grenier, whose cousin Fred started the event in 1979 to commemorate the community's centennial, had a ready explanation for taking a dip with his 1980 Futura Ligu-cool snowmobile.

"It's a lot of fun," said Grenier, soaked from the top of his brown leather cowboy boots to the bottom of his mud-streaked neck. "It's a thrill of lifetime."

The thrill usually only lasts a minute — the time it takes the engine to stall.

Grenier's machine, covered with slimy green water plants, looked like an over-sized planter as the helicopter gingerly set it down on the lake shore. He barely managed to travel 120 metres.

He said there is little chance of drowning since the lake is less than a metre deep.

The event has come a long way from the first year Fred Grenier made a solo attempt to cross the lake by snowmobile.

The village recreation centre has taken over the event, which is part of a weekend festival of bed races, dancing and baseball.

Randy Wiebe, the first driver to actually cross the lake, didn't even win. The judges declared farmer Richard Friesen the victor. He beat Wiebe by driving slower.

Just before reaching the far side, he turned his machine around to head back.

"It quit on me," he explained. "It heated up, it missed and lost RPMs and went down."

Although the event draws big crowds, Friesen may be its last champion.

The number of contestants has dropped from 11 in 1980 to seven both this year and last year.

Organizer Luc Labossiere said with the economy in rough shape, people are worried about damaging snowmobiles that can cost up to $3,000.

Commerce bank cuts large loan size

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce has cut the maximum size of its large corporate loans, such as its loan of more than $1 billion to Dome Petroleum Ltd., says bank chairman Russell Harrison.

In a special letter to the bank's more than 32,000 shareholders, Harrison said: "As of recent months it has been general Commerce policy to limit any single loan connection to not more than 15 per cent of capital." The loan to Dome represented about 45 per cent of bank capital, Commerce officials said.

Harrison also said Canadians have no reason to be concerned about the stability of the Canadian banking system, or of the Commerce itself.

"Canada's chartered banks are sound, strong and stable institutions more than able to absorb the inevitable losses of this economic recession while fully protecting their depositors and the essential interests of their shareholders," he said.

To suggest otherwise is to be "completely and dangerously mistaken," he added.

The loan to Dome sparked an embarrassing incident this month in which former British Columbia cabinet minister Gary Lauk caused a share price. Lauk, a member of the New Democratic Party, said the bank could go bankrupt, considering its exposure on Dome. He later withdrew his statements.

In Harrison's letter, the bank chairman dismissed as dangerous the kind of "loose talk and irresponsible rumor" that have questioned the bank's financial stability.

"Many of our customers are caught in a credit squeeze, the result of a combination of rising debt, abnormally high interest rates, and falling profits and incomes, for which I know of no contemporary precedent."

With bankruptcies up significantly, the banking system is facing a substantial increase in loan losses this year, he said. "Given the depth and length of this recession, it would be incredible if it were otherwise."

But though all major Canadian banks were forced to increase their loan-loss provisions in the first six months of the year, statistics at the Commerce did not look so bad.

Harrison said his bank's provision was $143 million, up 43 per cent from a year earlier.

Meanwhile, the Royal Bank of Canada increased its provision by 95 per cent, the Bank of Nova Scotia by 76 per cent, the Toronto-Dominion by 52 per cent and the Bank of Montreal by 37 per cent, he said.

"We are planning a further increase in our loan-loss provision for the remainder of the year," he added.

Vietnam withdrawal called a failure

HANOI (AFP) — Vietnam's grandly announced partial troop withdrawal from Cambodia has proved a political failure.

Intended as a political goodwill gesture by the Hanoi and Phnom Penh governments, the mystery surrounding the withdrawal of the soldiers has clouded the issue.

The withdrawal was announced on July 7 at the end of the sixth conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers of Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos, held in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon.

But no details have yet been given of how many soldiers were pulled out and how they were withdrawn. It was treated as a "military secret" to be kept at all costs.

Bureaucracy, lack of coordination between different departments and difficulties in communications have all helped in turning a diplomatic operation into a failure because of the uncertainties surrounding the whole affair.

The news agency said the soldiers were "warmly" welcomed in Ho Chi Minh city last Tuesday "by a large crowd." But an AFP correspondent who was in the city at the time did not see any soldiers or any large welcome demonstration.

Diplomatic sources here said the withdrawal certainly took place and the number of soldiers might be about 10,000 to 20,000.

Still undefeated

Lions upset Esks, snap streak

Mervyn Fernandez of B.C. Lions drew a standing ovation from 23,329 Vancouver football fans Sunday afternoon.

Edmonton Eskimos had their 17-game Canadian Football League regular-season and playoff undefeated streak snapped. Fernandez caught seven passes for 139 yards and snaked his way 74 yards on a punt return with less than five minutes remaining to lift the Lions to a 38-28 victory.

Linebacker Kevin Konar made a 35-yard interception of a Warren Moon pass for the final touchdown as B.C. beat Edmonton for the first time since 1978. The Eskimos had not been beaten, other than in exhibitions, since an identical 38-28 defeat July 19, 1981, in Winnipeg.

On Saturday, Hamilton Tiger-Cats defeated the Blue Bombers 36-25 in Winnipeg. Saskatchewan Roughriders defeated the Stampeders 25-19 in Calgary.

The Lions have a perfect 3-0-0 won-lost-tied record for first place in the Western Division, Edmonton and Winnipeg, both at 2-1-0. Saskatchewan, 1-2-0, and Calgary, 0-1-1, follow.

Hamilton, 2-1-0, leads the East with four points.

Still without a point are Ottawa Rough Riders and Montreal Concordes, both 0-2-0.

B.C. led 3-0 after one quarter on a Lui Passaglia field goal.

In the second quarter, Moon hit Tom Scott for a 25-yard TD but B.C. quarterback Roy Dewalt offset that with an 80-yard bomb to Harry Holt. Edmonton's Dave Cudler kicked a field goal and single and running back Kevin Cole ran over from two yards.

In the third quarter, the Lions' Larry Key barged over from one yard and the Eskimos' Neil Lumsden scored on a 25-yard pass from Moon.

In the fourth, Fernandez made a punt return and Konar put the finishing touches to the Lions' long-awaited victory.

In Winnipeg, rookie running back Milson Jones barged over from one yard to give a crowd of 27,919 expectations of a third straight Blue Bomber victory.

Wide receiver Ron Johnson got that one back for the Ticats on a 15-yard halfback-option pass from Keith Baker early in the second quarter, but the Bombers took a firm lead on a 26-yard Dieter Brock-to-Mike Holmes touchdown pass and another one-yarder along the ground by Jones.

Johnson caught two more touchdown passes — 16 and eight-yarders from Clements.

Bernie Ruoff tied the score 25-25 with a 49-yard field goal and, on the next play, Gerald Bess intercepted a Brock pass and scampered 45 yards down the sidelines to put Hamilton ahead.

In Calgary, quarterback Gerry Dattilo completed a 18-yard touchdown pass to Willie Armstead and ran the ball over from three yards for another major score before Saskatchewan running back Greg Fieger replied on a 16-yard run in the second quarter.

Saskatchewan coach Joe Faragalli replaced starter John Hufnagel, 15-30 for 188 yards, with rookie Joe Adams midway through the final quarter and Adams engineered the victory by passing to halfback John McCorquindale for a 13-yard touchdown and handing off to Fieger for a 16-yarder.

Candelaria back in form

In the past few seasons, John Candelaria of Pittsburgh Pirates has not come close to 1977 20-5 won-lost record and league-leading 2.34 earned run average, but Sunday he looked like the same kind of pitcher.

The skinny left-hander hurled a four-hitter to lead the Pirates to an 8-0 victory over Atlanta Braves.

The New York-born southpaw, 7-4, has lost much of the velocity from his once-powerful fastball but still showed his control.

Candelaria's performance was helped by the Pirates defence, which turned over three double plays. The only other runner was picked off base — so Candelaria pitched to the minimum 27 batters.

Pittsburgh blew the game open with a five-run spurt in the seventh inning, including a home run by Steve Nicosia.

In other NL action, it was: St. Louis 4, Houston 3; Philadelphia 1, Los Angeles 0; San Francisco 3, Montreal 2; San Diego 3, New York 2, in 10 innings; and

Alex tops U.S. Open

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Janet Alex had reason to feel confident and Beth Daniel reason to feel jinxed going into the final nine holes of the 30th U.S. Women's Open golf championship.

Alex, 26, said she was super confident at the 10th after she birdied the eighth and ninth holes. She rode that confidence to a fourth-round 68 and a six-stroke victory Sunday.

Her 72-hole total of 283, five under par on the Del Paso Country Club course, earned her $27,315 of the Open's $175,000 purse. She increased her 1982 earnings to $68,000.

Youth soccer second half under way

The Terrace Youth Soccer Association got the second half of its season underway Saturday morning with games in all but one of its divisions.

In the under-8 division, Doc's United beat Vic Froese Trucking Hot Rodders 5-0, Ken's Photo Mighty Mites dumped Totem Ford Mustangs 6-2, Centennial Lions edged Terrace Chrysler Aspens 1-0 and Tilden Tigers shut out Kinamen Jets 2-0.

Under-10 division play featured lots of scoring, with Surveyors and Co-op Kickers tying 5-5, Skeena Foresters squeezing out a narrow 5-4 win over Westland Eagles, Sundance Sonics running up the score on Shoppers Drug Mart to the tune of 11-0 and Pohle Coyotes picking on Finning Flyers 6-1.

In the under-11 and under-12 divisions, All Seasons Blazers dumped Bavarian Inn Oxen 6-2, 6-2, Bud's Truckers defaulted to Northern Drugs Rivers, Aqua Plumbing tripped Mr. Mike's Sharks 7-6 and Cedarland Giants beat Northwest Sportman 5-2.

In the first-half make-up game in the under-11 division Thursday, Northwest Sportsman shut out Mr. Mike's 5-0. The outcome of that game does not affect the first-half standings.

Both games in the under-13 division were one-sided affairs, with Northern Motor Inn losing to Rotary Wheels 6-2 and Manuel's Pumas dumping Irly Bird 10-4.

It was much the same story in the under-15 division, with Philpot's Cheetahs blanking Dairy Queen Busters 3-0 and Dave's Plumbing blasting Sight and Sound United 9-1.

The under-18 division has its first game tonight at Skeena Junior Secondary School, with Pizza Hut United and Twin River Falcons meeting in that age group's first second-half contest. There is also one game to be made up from the first half of the season in that age division, but a definite site has not yet been announced. The outcome of the game could affect the first-half standings, as Pizza Hut was only two points ahead of Twin River at the end of first-half play. If Twin River wins the game, they would tie Pizza Hut for the first-half title.

A little body English and a little concentration paid off for this Sundance Sonics as his twists confused both the Shoppers' defencemen and goalfender. The forward had both defenders going the wrong way with this shot, as it curled into the right corner of the net for the first goal of the second half. Sundance really ran up the score on Shoppers. In this 11-0 win Saturday morning, the first day of play in the second half of the Terrace Youth Soccer Association season.

Herb Quast got a little sideways in the late going of the A hobby stock trophy dash Sunday afternoon, but he still managed to hold off Tom Sheasby in the 17 car to win the first event of the day. Sunday was the Terrace Stock Car Club's annual Memorial Day event, which included a 50-lap main race and a media challenge race, as well as myriad draws by raceday sponsors Radio TK.

Sheasby's fast but Woodcock wins the Terrace Memorial Day race

The Terrace Stock Car Club held its annual Memorial Day Race Sunday at the Terrace Speedway, with two special events and a couple of day's track records highlighting the day's activity in front of a large crowd of about 600.

The track records belong to Tom Sheasby, who broke his own single lap record twice in his two time-trial laps. He lowered his 19.9 second record by one-tenth of a second on his first lap and dropped it to 19.7 seconds on his second, setting him up as the car to beat in the day's competition.

Unfortunately for Sheasby, his number 17 car wasn't one of the five machines remaining on the track at the end of the 50-lap Memorial race that capped the day's racing. Wes Woodcock won that event, held annually to honor four former members of the TSCC, three of whom died in a traffic accident while returning from a race in Prince George and another who died recently of natural causes.

Randy Goodwin was the second-place finisher in the 50-lap main event, with Herb Quast taking third place. Rick Kennedy was fourth and Dan Fagan fifth. Hot weather and a couple of fender-benders accounted for the high rate of attrition.

In the other special event of the day, Herald sports editor Don Schaffer won the four-lap Challenge of the Media Superstars, a promotional event featuring Terrace Mayor Helmut Giesbrecht, who finished second, and Radio TK sports announcer and television personality Rob Ruhnau, who took third spot. Schaffer was given the pole position, for reasons still unknown, and led from start to finish.

In A hobby stock regular events, Quast took the trophy dash, followed by Sheasby and Goodwin. Woodcock took the heat, with Sheasby second and Norm Stewart third, while Sheasby finally broke through to the win column with a victory in the hobby main. He held off Quast, who took second, and third-place finisher Goodwin.

In the B hobby stock class, it was Jim Daignault winning both the trophy dash and the main. Rick Rothney was second in the dash and third in the main, while Dennis Ward took third in the dash and second in the main. In the heat, it was Jim Livingstone the winner, with Ward second and Ernie Waters third.

Rick Kennedy was a triple winner in the A junker class, beating Randy Durand and Ken Pritchard in the trophy dash, Mike Borque and Dan Thickett in the heat and Borque and Durand in the main.

In the B junker class, Gerry Normandeau took two of the three races, winning the trophy dash over Dino Stella and Thickett and the main over Thickett and Stella, who traded second and third-places in the standings. Stu Schmidt won the B junker heat, with Fred Hewitt second and Normandeau third.

In the Powderpuff event, Melanie Rothney took first, followed by Janet Postuk in second and Audrey Black in third.

Next scheduled racing is August 8 at the Terrace Speedway.

4x4 racers hold year's first event

The Terrace Kermode Four-Wheelers Club held a sand drag meet and barrel races Saturday night at their track on the Ness road.

The barrel races event went without a hitch, as Peter Gaube won the dune buggy competition, followed by Joan Murphy and Dale Sweet. Women's competition was taken by Sharon Fagan, with Audrey Black second and Dawn Thomas third.

Men's short-wheelbase competition was won by Ron Schmidt, with Calvin Kerr second, while Len Pigeau took the long wheelbase event, followed by Dan Thickett in second and Wes Patterson in third.

The sand drags were a bit of a different story, though, due to problems with the timing system set up at the track. It was too dusty Saturday night to permit proper function of the lights, so a hand-start system was used.

Dieter Schlenker beat out Ron Schmidt in the competition modified B class, while in comp-mod C it was Calvin Kerr beating out Dan Thickett. Ladies C was won by Wanda Thickett, with Audrey Black second.

In the D comp class, it was Gary Kerr taking first place, with Wes Patterson second and Steve Johnson third. Dawn Thomas won the women's D comp event with Sharon Fagan second and Sharalyn Palagian third.

Kevin Cary won the stock drag over Len Pigeau, while Ivan Murphy took the dune buggy event, followed by Peter Robichaud and Peter Gaube.

Gamble goes wrong

Teams in the North American Soccer League are allowed to carry three substitutes, and Vancouver Whitecaps like to use their reserves for added offence. So Vancouver doesn't keep an extra goalkeeper, which is fine as long as starting goalie Tino Lettieri is healthy.

Arnoux hard man to stop

LE CASTELLET (AP) — Five times in the last 10 laps of the French Grand Prix, Renault team manager Jean Sage showed Rene Arnoux, the team's No. 2 driver, a sign reading Prost-Arnoux.

Five times Arnoux ignored the order to slow down and let team leader Alain Prost take the lead and win.

The Frenchmen crossed the line Sunday with Arnoux ahead by 17 seconds and quite unrepentant. He thought he was justified in disobeying the order, given the extent of his lead and the possibility he may have been forced to pit with a damaged front wheel.

The second-place finish raised Prost to third place in the standings with 25 points, within striking distance of leader Didier Pironi, who finished third ahead of teammate Patrick Tambay in the Ferrari turbos. Pironi has 39 points and Watson, who failed to finish, had 30.

But when he got hurt Sunday against Toronto Blizzard, Whitecaps defender Bob Lenarduzzi reluctantly filled in and looked helpless as Toronto added a late goal for a 3-1 victory.

In the only other game Sunday, New York Cosmos defeated San Diego Sockers 2-1 in overtime.

Carruthers' win Mr. and Mrs.

Bruce and Debbie Carruthers won the Skeena Valley Golf Club's Mr. and Mrs. interclub tournament Sunday afternoon, shooting a 133 over the course to take the low gross title.

The Carruthers' topped a 32-couple field in the event, which featured mostly Terrace golfers. Second low gross was won by Ian and Sharon Smith, who shot 138 in the two-day event. The low net title was won by Rick Dunn and Diane White, who had a 32 Sunday to take the win, while second low net was won by Ray and Elaine Johnson, who shot 38.

The low net was determined by Sunday's play only.

Copper River sweeps slowpitch

Copper River Motel swept a doubleheader from Terrace Men's Slowpitch League action.

Copper River took the first game 12-10 behind Gary Wilcox's pitching, while they had an easier time in the second game, winning 8-1. Leo Palmer was the winner in that game, while Stan Brasseau was the losing pitcher for Loggers in the first game and Ken Austin pitched for Loggers in the second.

Tonight's slow-pitch game sees Copper River taking on SKB Moisons at Riverside Park, with game time at 7 p.m.

Britain thankful

LONDON (CP) — Britain's civil, military and religious leaders gave thanks for the June 14 victory over Argentina in the Falkland Islands today in a service at St. Paul's Cathedral.

With relatives of the 254 British dead, they saluted the cessation of hostilities, mourned the dead and prayed for peace and reconciliation in the South Atlantic.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Robert Runcie, extended the scope of mourning to include Argentinian victims of the conflict.

He stressed the common sorrow of relatives of the British and Argentinian dead and suggested that a shared anguish could be a bridge of reconciliation.

Cardinal Basil Hume, head of the Roman Catholic Church in England and Wales, led a prayer for both the Argentine and British soldiers who were killed.

In praising the courage, endurance and restraint of the British forces who fought in the Falklands, Runcie also stressed that those caught in the violence of the Northern Ireland conflict should not be forgotten.

Two IRA bomb attacks in central London last week killed 10 soldiers.

In the aftermath of the bombing, Scotland Yard mounted one of the biggest security operations in modern history to protect members of the Royal Family and other dignitaries arriving for the service, which was watched by millions on television.

All streets leading to the domed cathedral atop Ludgate Hill were blocked, and trained police dogs checked for explosives before the service began. A Scotland Yard helicopter equipped with a long-range camera hovered overhead as police marksmen kept watch from rooftops.

Today's ceremony came almost a year to the day after the wedding of Prince Charles, heir to the throne, and Lady Diana Spencer last July 29 but had none of the exuberance of that occasion.

It was the first public function for the Princess of Wales since the birth of her first child, Prince William, last month.

The ecumenical services were attended by all members of the Royal Family except Prince Andrew, the Queen's second son, who is still in the Falklands, serving as a helicopter pilot aboard the aircraft carrier HMS Invincible.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and members of her cabinet as well as former prime ministers James Callaghan, Edward Heath and Lord Home occupied prominent places, as did the commanders of the Falklands task force and land forces.

Hidden in the crowd was one of the political victims of the conflict, Lord Carrington, the former foreign secretary.

Accepting a share in the blame for the national humiliation after Britain had been caught napping by Argentina's invasion of the Falklands April 2, Carrington resigned three days later.

Did you know in one year the Salvation Army in Canada provided for 54,036 patients who entered Salvation Army general and maternity hospitals and 13,641 major and 13,944 minor operations were performed.

Auctions reveal tough times

EDMONTON (CP) — About 300 people jammed into Fenske Auctions' Edmonton warehouse Saturday to grab the bargains at a sheriff's sale.

There were savings galore. A $50 ladies' coat went for $20 and a $30 blouse for $10.

But the auctioneer saw a sad and frightening side to the fast-paced dealing.

Bob Fenske, who has been in the business of selling off sheriff's seizures and receivership goods since the 1890s Depression, said every sale represents someone who has gone out of business or could not pay debts or rent.

It looks too familiar to him.

"The Depression is here again," Fenske said. "We haven't had the bust yet here (in Alberta), but I'd say we have a depression."

"I remember doing sheriff's sales during the last depression. We're starting to see things repeat themselves."

"The last depression started the same way; businesses started going bankrupt, prices dropped, money was tight."

He says his theory is proven by a doubling of sheriff's sales and receivership sales in the last few years.

"Receiverships are extremely high," Fenske said. "Five years ago there were hardly any, but they started trickling in about three years ago and now there's more all the time."

He pointed to his office bulletin board. Last year, sheriff's and receivership sales covered only half the board. On Saturday, the board was thick with notices.

The list of items up for bids includes quality goods: a dozen fur coats from a bankrupt furrier, two 25-point solitaire diamond rings from a failed jewelry store, filing cabinets and furniture from a collapsed real estate firm, to name a few.

Like his father, Bob Fenske Jr. blames the economy.

He said the biggest increase in sheriff's sales has resulted from failures of small businesses. But he added even bigger businesses are starting to hurt.

"We used to get the smaller outfits, shoe stores, drapery shops, music stores, those sort of places. Now the big fellas are starting to fail."

Auction-goers cite the stumbling economy as the reason for their presence also.

"People are tightening up," said Edmonton accountant Jerry Jeske. He said he sees more and more people coming to auctions, looking for bargains and ways to cut budget corners.

"Most of these auctions are MacEachen auctions," Jeske said in a reference to federal Finance Minister Allan MacEachen.

Farmer Bill Kurylo and his wife Stella bought a $50 pair of work boots for $4 and a $256 leather coat for $35 Saturday.

"If I had more money to play with I'd probably buy in stores more often," says Kurylo. "But everybody's tightening up, looking for bargains, so they come here."

Stone offers garden help

MONTREAL (CP) — Two years ago, Alan Stone paid $175 for a tiller to save gardening time. Now he uses the machine to work the gardens of six retired women who live on his street.

"These are tough times," says the resident of Pointe Claire, a suburban city just west of Montreal.

"But one thing is that people seem more aware of the need to help their neighbors. In return for my help, my next-door neighbor does my walk in the winter with her snow blower, and my neighbor across the way does my driveway with his."

Stone, 54, also shares his freezer with yet another neighbor in exchange for homemade apple sauce and fruit.

City dwellers are discovering old-fashioned country neighborliness saves money during tight economic times and pays off in friendship.

"Sure it's nice to save money," says Jill Corner, a resident of west-end Winchester St., where neighbors have helped each other with a variety of tasks ranging from roof repairs to babysitting and energy conservation by sharing car rides.

"But we do it out of friendship, too," Corner adds. "Most of the people on this street come from other cities and countries. So we often look to our neighbors for the comfort, advice and practical assistance which relatives once provided."

Five years ago, Daphne Nahmias, the co-ordinator of a downtown community centre, started a program called LINK, which is designed to help residents, particularly shut-ins, look after each other. About 300 in the downtown area give and receive services through the project.

"I've calculated that LINK people save the government $18,000 a year in homemaker fees by shopping for their shut-in friends," Nahmias says. "You can't help but be aware of the monetary value of good neighbors."

Residents could easily be spending hundreds of dollars on equivalent services provided by agencies or buying alone.

Tony Bird — who lives on suburban Ste. Anne de Bellevue's MacDonald College campus with her husband and eight-year-old son — says she saves about $30 a week by sharing a babysitter with a neighbor.

Mary Cardoza, who lives in the west end, says the discovery of a shared interest — such as gardening — can have economic benefits too.

Cardoza's garden is filled with plants given by neighbors.

Woman watches democracy

OTTAWA (CP) — Every afternoon, an elderly woman in Saskatoon turns on the television and watches fascinated while a large cast of accomplished characters wheedle, cajole, insult, love, hate, laugh, rant, sneer, parry and reconcile.

Ah, you say, another soap opera.

Nope. It's democracy in action. Question Period in the Commons, a favorite five-day-a-week television show among the elderly and probably the most important 45 minutes of the day for most politicians in the capital.

While the Saskatoon woman and her counterparts from coast to coast watch, the Liberal government and the Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party opposition have at each other.

The opposition seeks information in a manner designed to put the Liberals in the worst possible light. Cabinet ministers answer in a way designed to make the government look good and the opposition particularly stupid.

What the audience doesn't realize is the Question Period characters spend considerable time preparing for their television appearance.

For instance, there is a meeting of Tory experts on various subjects at 8:45 a.m. each day to consider what questions should be asked by whom and how.

Meantime, staff of Liberal cabinet ministers try to second guess the opposition and prepare answers to anticipated questions.

The rewards and perils are great. A good question-and-answer exchange means publicity, including exposure on the national television news. So does a bad gaffe.

For men and women who depend on the goodwill of the voters, nothing can be more important.

British seek Irishman

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard said today it is seeking an Irishman who disappeared from a London hotel — leaving an unpaid bill of $1,000 ($2,200) — on the day two Irish Republican Army bombs killed 10 soldiers in two London parks.

A spokesman for the Yard, headquarters of the metropolitan police, said an informant is being questioned in connection with the search for the Irishman who stayed at the Capital Hotel, a few minutes walk from the spot where the first bomb was exploded by remote control in a car parked in Hyde Park last Tuesday.

The Daily Mail reported that the man had a Northern Ireland accent and left behind a briefcase containing a leaflet from a London security firm.

Richard Bridge, a former army officer and executive of the firm, said he told the Yard about a caller fitting the Irishman's description. He said the man inquired about protection techniques and hand grenades, had dirty, bitten-down fingernails and was not wearing a tie — "definitely not the sort of customer we usually get," Bridge said.

The bomb in Hyde Park killed four members of the Blues and Royals troop of the Queen's ceremonial Household Cavalry. A second bomb exploded under a Regent's Park bandstand two hours later, killing six band members of the Royal Green Jackets regiment and injuring 49 other soldiers, police officers and bystanders.

The outlawed IRA, which is fighting to oust Britain from Protestant-dominated Northern Ireland and unite the province with the Roman Catholic Irish republic, claimed responsibility for both bombings.

Meanwhile, the furor continued over two British security scandals — the intruder who crept into the Queen's bedroom, and the resignation of the monarch's bodyguard after he disclosed that he had an affair with a male prostitute.

MPs were furious last week that security screenings did not disclose police Cmdr. Michael Trestrail's homosexuality. But a lawyer for Trestrail, who had protected the Queen for nine years, said Sunday that Trestrail did not undergo a security check until three or four months before he resigned July 17.

The lawyer, Sir David Napley, said Trestrail kept his affair with Michael Rauch secret and that it was "casual, occasional and ended three years ago." He said Trestrail understood security clearances were given only to people with access to secret documents, which he never had.

"The policy was modified only recently and it was only three or four months ago when he was first vetted," Napley said. Opposition Labor MP Tom Torney said he is "astounded and appalled" and will ask Home Secretary William Whitelaw to explain why Trestrail was not investigated years ago.

Whitelaw, whose ministry has authority over the police, also is under pressure because the police squad assigned to protect Buckingham Palace did not intercept Michael Fagan, 31, before he got into the Queen's bedroom July 9.

Fagan sat on the foot of the Queen's bed and talked with her for 10 minutes until a chambermaid and footman finally answered her calls for help.

Astronauts Thomas Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield were honored Friday in Baltimore with a "Space Day" declaration as they kicked off a national tour.

The astronauts, who piloted the space shuttle Columbia on its last mission, drew lots of attention from children as they walked through the city.

Eight-year-old Kelsha Wilson said the astronaut had just returned from Jupiter, No. corrected Kelsha's friend, Michelle Turner, 11. She said the spacemen were honored because it was their first time on Earth.

Singer Andy Gibb says he wants to go public about his now-finished romance with actress Victoria Principal so his fans will understand what he's been through.

Gibb said Friday on the ABC television show Good Morning, America that his relationship with Principal, of the series Dallas, was "very much a sweet dream of a relationship, and it was also a nightmare at points."

When the two finally broke up, Gibb said he suffered a nervous breakdown and "gave up everything . . . I didn't care about life."

After flirting with heavy cocaine use, Gibb has since stopped using all drugs and he wants his fans to know "exactly what happened to me."

Actor Hal Linden, who for eight years starred as a police captain in the Barney Miller television series, says he's a "big fan of cops."

Linden was made honorary chief of detectives of the Metropolitan Toronto Police at a light-hearted ceremony Friday.

Linden said that playing the series has made him appreciate police work.

University of Toledo swimmer John Muenzer made it two-thirds of the way across the widest part of Lake Erie before yielding Friday to exhaustion after 27 hours in the water.

Muenzer, 20, covered 56 kilometres before leaving the water at about 6 p.m. EDT for medical care aboard the boat accompanying him.

The swimmer, who has set numerous Toledo University swimming records, attempted the feat last year but high winds, two-and-a-half metre waves and thunderstorms forced him to stop after 16 hours.

It was hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalks of Chadron, Neb., Friday afternoon.

Employees of radio station KCSR cracked an egg on the sidewalk and invited listeners to guess how long it would take to cook in 42-degree heat.

Wife feels whipped

MOSCOW (AP) — The American wife of a Soviet hunger striker was leaving for home today, uncertain whether she will see her husband alive again but vowing to continue fighting to win him the right to join her in the U.S.

"Today I feel whipped," said Elena Kusmenko Balovlenkov, a nurse at City Hospital in Baltimore, Md. "But I'm not giving up. I will continue my fight, hopefully with the support of the American people."

Mrs. Balovlenkov, 29, said Soviet officials offered to let her stay with her husband, Yuri, but that she wanted to take 25-month-old daughter Yekaterina back home.

"The trip has been a success, because Yuri saw Yekaterina for the first time," said Mrs. Balovlenkov, who arrived on a 10-day visa on July 17. Yuri Balovlenkov, 33, a former computer programmer, said he felt ill on the 22nd day of his latest protest fast. "My liver feels bad," he said. "There is a strong pain there."

Said his wife: "We don't know if we will ever see each other again."

Mrs. Balovlenkov said her husband "never really recovered from his last strike. Most of the weight he regained was fluid, not muscle mass." He has lost one third of his original body weight of about 170 pounds, she said.

Balovlenkov ended a 43-day hunger strike on June 21, claiming that Soviet authorities promised him permission to emigrate. Soviet emigration officials later denied making any such promise and said Balovlenkov couldn't leave because his job had exposed him to unspecified state secrets.

They also refused permission for Sergei Petrov, a freelance photographer, to join his American wife, Virginia Hurt Johnson of Roanoke, Va. Petrov ended his strike on the 51st day last Thursday after his wife ended a four-day visit. Few people survive long past 60 days on hunger strike.

Zimbabwe faces deterioration

HARARE, Zimbabwe (Reuters) — The Zimbabwe government faced a deteriorating security situation today after two major weekend attacks.

Saboteurs struck the country's top air base Sunday and put out of action a large part of Zimbabwe's air force.

Less than 48 hours earlier, gunmen abducted six foreign tourists — two Americans, two Britons and two Australians — and said they will kill them within a week unless certain political demands are met.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's government has given no indication yet of how it will react to the blows to its armed forces and to its tourist industry, a vital foreign-exchange earner.

The attack on Thornhill base outside the midlands city of Gweru was probably the single most serious attack against the government since it took office in April, 1980.

The government said several aircraft were damaged.

Informed sources said they believe 13 planes were hit, including the air force's latest fighters, four Hawk jets worth $35 million, which arrived from Britain only 10 days ago.

Residents said damage appeared to be serious. They reported a series of loud pre-dawn explosions during about 45 minutes, accompanied by flames leaping from hangars.

Unofficial counts are that Zimbabwe's air force has about 50 combat aircraft.

No one claimed responsibility for the attack, but it appeared certain the government would first look toward South Africa and toward the opposition party of Joshua Nkomo. Zimbabwe and its black neighbors have frequently accused South Africa of sabotage and destabilization.

Hundreds of white Rhodesian military personnel fled south two years ago after the civil war that resulted in black majority rule, taking with them intimate knowledge of security installations. The government blamed South African agents for blowing up $30 million worth of munitions at Inkomo Barracks near Harare last August.

Thornhill also lies on the northern edge of Matabeleland province, the heartland of Nkomo's political support. Nkomo's former guerrillas have been officially blamed for an anti-government campaign in the region that has taken at least 30 lives in the last five months.

Mugabe fired Nkomo from his coalition cabinet in February on allegations of plotting a coup and has accused Nkomo's party of a gun attack on the gates of his Harare home last month.

The gunmen who took the foreign hostages signed a ransom note "ZIPRA forces," a reference to Nkomo's guerrillas, and demanded the release of former guerrilla commanders — Dumiso Dabengwa and Lookout Masuku from jail where they are being held in connection with the alleged coup plot.

Hussein consulted

LONDON (Reuters) — U.S. President Ronald Reagan's Middle East envoy Philip Habib arrived in London today to consult King Hussein of Jordan on the future of Palestinian guerrillas trapped by Israeli forces in Beirut.

King Hussein is in Britain on a private visit. Habib, shuttling around the Middle East to try to defuse the crisis in Lebanon, conferred Sunday with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and failed to persuade him to accept any of the estimated 5,000 to 6,000 Palestinian fighters.

Western diplomatic sources doubted Habib would be any more successful with King Hussein because of the Jordanian leader's long disdain for the guerrillas.

The sources said Habib and Hussein were certain to evaluate the significance of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat signing a document accepting all United Nations resolutions relating to Palestine.

The sources noted there were conflicting views on whether that amounted to recognition of Israel.

On his way to London, Habib stopped in Rome for talks with Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo. Italy has offered troops for an international peacekeeping force in Lebanon.

The U.S. Embassy refused to say where Habib was meeting Hussein but informed sources said the talks were being held at the king's private London residence.

An embassy spokesman said Habib would return to the Middle East later today but declined to give his destination.

Highjackers bludgeoned

PEKING (AP) — Passengers and crew aboard a hijacked Chinese airliner grabbed umbrellas, belts and bottles and bludgeoned their five hijackers Sunday, apparently killing two in "a great scene of blood and gore," an American passenger said today.

"There was a lot of blood and screaming — it was like the French Revolution and everyone was trying to get in on it," said W. J. Gunther of Flemington, N.J., who was aboard the aircraft.

Official Chinese reports said all five hijackers were captured alive. But some American and Japanese passengers said several were beaten to death in the melee as the plane began to nose-dive.

All 80 passengers, including about 20 Americans, were reported safe by Chinese officials. The co-pilot and the navigator were reported slightly injured.

The Soviet-built four-prop Il'yushin-18 was hijacked Sunday from Xian but landed safely in Shanghai, despite running out of fuel and having a 1.8-metre hole torn out of the fuselage when an explosive brought aboard by one of the hijackers went off.

The hijackers, armed with knives and explosives, wanted to go to Taiwan. It was the first confirmed attempted hijacking of a Chinese airliner, western diplomatic observers believe.

Gunther, part of a group of New Jersey retirees, recounted the adventure in a telephone interview from Wuxi, where he and his group went from Shanghai.

"We thought we were goners," he said. "There was a gaping hole in the side of the plane, we were out of fuel because the pilot had been circling. We had these five crazy men in front. What was there left for us to do but try to stop them, we thought."

The battle began and the passengers won. After the plane landed, Gunther said, the hijackers "were dragged out one by one, right before our eyes down the aisle — feet first." "All were unconscious and two of them appeared definitely to be dead. Afterward we sang, 'Praise to God.' It was an incredible experience and so good to be alive."

Xinhua said the plane, which was on a domestic flight from the ancient capital of Xian to Shanghai, landed safely in the coastal metropolis Sunday afternoon almost three hours after five Chinese men commandeered it about 130 kilometres west of Shanghai.

Chinese officials gave no more information about the incident today, but Japanese sources in Shanghai said Japanese passengers on the plane reported the hijackers exploded a bomb in a forward toilet.

Most of the American passengers were reported to be older tourists returning from a visit to Xian, 625 kilometres west of Shanghai and a leading tourist attraction because of the 2,000-year-old life-size terra cotta warriors and horses unearthed there.

The five hijackers were armed with knives and explosives. Two of them stormed into the cabin and demanded that the plane fly to Taiwan, seat of the rival Nationalist government. The pilot agreed but circled Shanghai for about 2½ hours, and the hijackers did not discover the deception.

When the plane's fuel was about to run out, the co-pilot went to the back of the plane and talked with some of the Chinese passengers. Shortly after, he, other crew members and about 15 of the Chinese passengers rushed the hijackers and overpowered them.

Under Chinese law, the hijackers can be charged with counter-revolutionary crimes for which the maximum penalty is death.

Pilot reviews crash film

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — The pilot of a helicopter that crashed on a movie set, killing actor Vic Morrow and two child actors, says he has changed his mind and agreed to help review films of the accident.

The helicopter pilot, Dorsey Wingo, initially refused to join federal and state investigators at a special showing scheduled today of what he called "the holocaust sequence," because he did not want to relive the ordeal.

But Wingo said he changed his mind because he wanted to learn exactly why his Bell UH-1 helicopter slammed into the shallow Santa Clara River on Friday, killing Morrow and the two child actors, My-Ca Dihn Le, 7, of Cerritos, and Renee Shinn Chen, 7, of Pasadena.

Parts of the helicopter have been sent to Washington, D.C., for tests that could show if the explosions during a Vietnam battle sequence were too powerful.

Wingo, who flew helicopter missions in Vietnam for a year, said he was hovering at about nine metres when explosives buried below started detonating.

"I was just amazed, I couldn't believe it," said Wingo, recalling his thoughts as the helicopter began rocking and then went into a spin. "I expected to die in it."

State labor officials have launched investigations into why the two children were working on the film at 2:30 a.m., eight hours past the legal work deadline for youngsters.

Meanwhile, Morrow was eulogized Sunday at services as an actor at the peak of his talents who gave the best performance of his career for The Twilight Zone before being killed in the stunt for the movie's final scene.

In The Twilight Zone, the 53-year-old actor played a bigot who was turning into the people he hated. It was one of four sequences of Steven Spielberg's film version of the popular 1960s TV series.

Morrow, best known for his work on the television series, Combat, is survived by two daughters and a granddaughter.
